BENEFITS OF WEARING COPPER

The use of copper for medicinal purposes is found throughout recorded history. The world's oldest medical texts, the Eber Papyrus, states, "Treat inflammation with pulverized copper". Today, thousands of years later, pharmacies around the world offer copper bracelets as a safe first aid for joint pains.

"Copper, when in contact with the skin, forms chelates with human sweat (sometimes seen as green deposits) and is thus absorbed through the skin. Think of a bracelet as a 'time-released' source of copper." -Dr. Ray Walker, University of Newcastle, Australia. "Copper chelates are more effective and less toxic than drugs being used to treat arthritis." -John Sorenson, Ph.D.

Probably the most authoritative publication on the subject is Dr. Helmar Dollwet's book, The Copper Bracelet and Arthritis, 1981 Vantage Press. In it Dr. Dollwet explains that copper is an essential element of an enzyme necessary for the production and regeneration of the cartilage lining the bone surfaces. Copper (and zinc) he explains, are also essential to Superoxide Dismutase (SOD) which cleans up superoxide radicals that are destructive to human tissues.
